GCRC holds annual awards program

The Gallaudet Community Relations Council held its sixth annual Awards and Recognition Program on Saturday, March 30 at the MSSD Auditorium.

Television personality Carol Randolph presided as mistress of ceremonies for the evening. Randolph—who is the hostess of "Morning Break" on WDVM-TV, the local CBS station—entered wholeheartedly into the festivities as she assisted Council members in surprising ex officio GCRC member LaVarne Hines with a Special Achievement award.

Hines, who is the director of Administrative and Community Services at Gallaudet, has worked with the GCRC for the past six years. The inscription on her plaque read in part, "Ex officio never looked more ex-celent!"

Each year the GCRC, an organization comprised of people residing or working in the near Northeast neighborhood where Gallaudet's Kendall Green campus is located and people studying or working at Gallaudet, recognizes outstanding contributions to the community with awards to individuals and organizations. Community groups also take the occasion to present their own awards. Businesses within the community support the activities of the Awards Program, and performers from Gallaudet and from the community provide entertainment between award presentations.

This year Loraine DiPietro, director of the National Information Center on Deafness, accepted the Community Outreach award for the Gallaudet College Volunteer Program. A second Community Outreach award was presented to the Community for Creative

Gallaudet to co-sponsor NAD Forum

Gallaudet College, through the College for Continuing Education, will be one of the co-sponsors of the NAD Forum '85, to be held in Las Vegas Oct. 17-19.

The forum theme is "Life and Work in the 21st Century: Deaf People of Tomorrow." The objectives include sharing information on current developments and discussing needed directions. The four forum topics are:

- Education: All ages, present and future;
- Employment: Career planning, occupations, retraining, future opportunities and hazards;
- Communications/Technologies: Effectiveness of various methodologies, interpreters, communication devices, aural engineering, future needs; and

- Family-Community Life: Family dynamics, family education and services, community accessibility, full involvement of deaf people, policies and politics.

The forum's target audiences include professionals, whether or not they are working in the field of deafness, deaf people and families.

The National Association of the Deaf will also conduct a National Symposium on Sign Language Research and Training (NSSLRT) Oct. 14-17 at the same site.

Roz Rosen, dean of the College for Continuing Education, will serve as the chairperson for the NAD forum. For more information or a speaker's application form, contact Rosen at x5599 or stop by Room 201 of College Hall.

Board of Trustees selects two alumni for fellowships

The Gallaudet Board of Trustees at its March meeting selected two Gallaudet alumni as the recipients of the first Gallaudet Institute fellowships.

William J.A. Marshall and Judith A. Tingley were chosen from among 17 applicants to serve as the 1985-86 fellows.

Marshall, an associate professor in the Department of Administration and Supervision in the School of Education and Human Services, earned his master's degree in the education of the deaf from Gallaudet in 1965. He received his bachelor's degree one year earlier in pre-medicine and philosophy from Stonehill College in Massachusetts. Marshall received a doctor of education degree in special education from the University of Illinois at Champagne-Urbana in 1970.

Tingley, who has worked as the state coordinator of Services for the Deaf in California since 1978, received a bachelor of arts degree in English from Gallaudet in 1965. She received a master of arts degree in the education of exceptional children (deaf and hard of hearing) one year later from California State University at San Francisco.

Both Marshall and Tingley will participate in the intensive one-year senior executive development program from June 1 of this year to May 30, 1986.

They will participate in several off-campus management development workshops (e.g., at Harvard University and the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania). Both will also be engaged in an administrative internship in the Office of the President at Gallaudet.

The fellowship experiences will help

Innovation programs

Applications, due June 7, are invited by the U.S. Department of Education for new projects under the Auxiliary Activities-Innovation Programs for the Severely Handicapped Children program.

This program supports research, development or demonstration, training and dissemination activities. It is estimated that approximately $880,000 will be available to support nine new projects.

For more information, call the Office of Sponsored Programs at x5034 or Paul Thompson at Special Education Programs at 732-1161.

Phone equipment assists with long distance meetings

New equipment to make conferences available to off-campus participants is now available from Telecommunications Services.

The portable conference unit is a telephone set with two microphones and a built-in speaker. Groups can use the unit to include people in meetings or conferences who cannot be physically present.

"Regular telephone lines pose a problem at meetings," explained Mike Southers, manager of Telecommunications Services. "Either you need to keep passing the telephone around the table or else everyone has to get on a different extension, which results in poor sound quality as more people are added. With this equipment, everyone can stay in the same room and the sound quality is better than a traditional speaker phone."

The portable conference unit saves money since departments can arrange to call speakers instead of paying for them to come to campus. Busy professionals are more likely to accept invitations to speak since travel time is eliminated and resource materials can be at hand for answering questions, Southers said.

The unit works like an ordinary telephone except that people attending a meeting speak into microphones instead of a handset. Everything said by the off-campus participant is broadcast to the group through the built-in speaker.

A moderator can control the discussion by using buttons to turn the microphones on and off. Lifting the handset disconnects the speaker to allow for private conversations. The unit can be attached to a public address system for use with large groups.

To learn more about or to reserve the telephone conference unit, call Southers at x5938.

Peggy Reichard, a home economics teacher at MSSD, assists a student with a sewing project.

General campus announcements

- The annual Sports Award Banquet will be held May 8 at 7 p.m. at La Fontaine Bleu in Lanham, MD. This year's speaker will be Wayne Sevier, special teams' coach for the Washington Redskins.

The evening honors Gallaudet students who have participated in various sports during the 1984-85 academic year.

For the first time, the program will be open to members of the Gallaudet Community. A limited number of tickets for the buffet dinner and awards program are available at $25 per person. Buying a ticket also sponsors a student athlete's attendance at the program, so half the ticket price is tax deductible.

For more information or to order tickets, contact Lil Holt at x5005. Checks should be made payable to Gallaudet College.

- The Student Union, a unit of Student Affairs, is sponsoring a lunch-time colloquium series through May 8. The series will be held in the Abbey at Ely Center at noon. Everyone is welcome to bring their lunches.

Clerc exhibit set for GCAA reunion

The Laurent Clerc Bicentennial Anniversary Committee will put together an exhibit during the Gallaudet College Alumni Association's 32nd Triennial Reunion in June.

The committee, sponsored by the alumni association, will hold a ceremony and exhibit June 20 at 3:15 p.m. at the Merrill Learning Center. Guests will be invited to join the program in observance of the 200th anniversary of the birth of Clerc, the first deaf teacher of deaf students in the United States.

The committee plans to collect some of Clerc's mementoes and reproductions of portraits to display at the exhibit which falls during the June 19-23 GCAA reunion.

Members of the bicentennial anniversary committee are Gilbert C. Eastman, '57, chairperson; Francis C. Higgins, '36; Michael Olson, '79; and Carl N. Shroeder, '83.

lege" will be discussed April 17 by Richard Meisegeier, director of Honors Programs and a professor of sociology.

"Student Teaching in the Public Classroom," a videotape presentation featuring David Martin of the Department of Education at Gallaudet, will be shown April 24.

Donalda Ammons, vice chair of the U.S. Team Committee of the World Games for the Deaf will talk on "Deaf Olympics at Los Angeles" on May 1 while David DeLorenzo of the Gallaudet Archives will give a slide presentation May 8 on "Gallaudet College History from 1860 to 1910 under Edward Miner Gallaudet."

- Free physical check-ups will be offered to all Gallaudet employees and members of their families as part of National Health Fair Week. The check-ups, which will include blood pressure, anemia and glaucoma tests, will be given in the multipurpose room at Ely Center April 19 from noon to 7 p.m.

- Beginning next month, anyone who wants to receive the campus cable television guide must be on the subscription list. The deadline to do so is the end of this month.

Gallaudet College is an equal opportunity employer-education institution. Programs and services offered by Gallaudet College receive substantial financial support from the Department of Education.

Among Ourselves

Susan Ruffin of the Business Education Department at MSSD addressed 195 business teachers on "Infusing Microcomputer Instruction in Business Education" at a regional conference in October. Held in Cumberland, MD, the conference included community college educators from West Virginia as well as Cumberland and Hagerstown.

In December Ruffin addressed a conference on microcomputers held in Montgomery County, MD. Participants included educators from Montgomery County public schools, the University of Maryland, Anne Arundel Community College and local business schools in the metropolitan area.

Hubert Anderson of KDES was the main speaker for a Dec. 8 program titled "Deaf People in Sports" presented as part of the D.C. public library's "Deaf Heritage Week." Anderson is the first black U.S. coach to participate in the World Games for the Deaf. The program also recognized Gallaudet volunteer Art Kruger for his pioneering work in the field of sports for deaf people. Kruger founded the American Athletic Association of the Deaf (AAAD) in 1945.

Thirty-eight MSSD Student Life staffers are taking "Student Development in a Secondary School Setting" at American University this semester. Ten MSSD program directors are taking "Diagnostics of Leadership: Exploring Management Styles and Administrative Skills" from William Marshall of the Department of Administration.

Barry A. Crouch, an associate professor in the Department of History, had an article published in the winter 1984 issue of the Journal of Social History. Entitled "A Spirit of Lawlessness: White Violence; Texas Blacks, 1865-1868," the article explores race relations in Texas immediately following the Civil War. Crouch is completing his fifth year teaching American history at Gallaudet.

Non-Violence.

The Rev. Ernest Gibson, executive director of the Council of Churches of Washington, received the Outreach Ministry award for his "selfless service to the homeless in our community and his support of many community organizations."

The Hospitality Community Federal Credit Union was recognized with the Economic Development award.

Four people received GCRC Individual Achievement awards this year. Robert "Bob" Artiss, a third generation Washingtonian who is on the faculty of the University of the District of Columbia, was saluted for his extensive involvement in the community. Twila Cavey Ness, a GCRC member who works in the Learning Resource Center at MSSD, was recognized for her service to the GCRC. Laura-Jean "Lolly" Gilbert—director of Publications at Gallaudet and an officer of the GCRC's sister council, the Gallaudet Northwest

Kathryn Meadow-Orlans, a researcher in the Gallaudet Research Institute, has been invited to receive an honorary degree from Denison University, her undergraduate alma mater. Meadow-Orlans will receive the "Doctor of Humane Letters" during Denison's commencement exercises on June 1. Meadow-Orlans is the author of "Deafness and Child Development" and (with Hilde Schlesinger) of "Sound and Sign: Childhood Deafness and Mental Health."

Martha Manson of KDES and Cindy Puthoff of MSSD spoke to teachers of hearing impaired students at the Language Arts Conference at the California School for the Deaf in Fremont, CA. Manson presented "Publishing Student Work" and Puthoff presented "Dialogue Journals: How Can They Help Your Students."

Fred Mangrubang of KDES has been appointed to a three-year term on the Special Education Advisory Board of the National Science Teachers Association (NSTA) and to the NSTA Evaluation Team. Mangrubang also participated in the Leadership Training Institute on Science Activities for the Visually Impaired/Science Enrichment for Learners with Physical Handicaps held at East Carolina University April 2-5.

Rich Lytle, an MSSD counselor, presented a workshop on reality therapy to the staff at the Virginia School for the Deaf in Hampton, VA. Chuck Dietz, also of MSSD, presented a "Computers in the Classroom" workshop at the same time.

Jean Slobodzian of KDES and Cindy Puthoff of MSSD presented a reading and writing workshop to mainstream teachers in Ohio at the Ohio Resource Center for Low Incidence and Severely Handicapped. This was part of a series of workshops in the state of Ohio sponsored by outreach ASP.

Campus Community Relations Council—was praised as "a non-stop wonder among community activists." Assistant principal of KDES and vice chair of the GCRC Al Couthen received an award for his strong advocacy of community and college interaction.

The Kendall Demonstration Elementary School Student Company, MSSD student Allison Gompf and Joy King and Craig Thompson of the community provided entertainment for the evening.

College to offer class in music appreciation

Gallaudet will offer a music appreciation course this fall. The three-credit class, tentatively scheduled for Tuesdays and Thursdays from 1 to 2:20 p.m., will be taught by a hearing impaired instructor.

Students interested in more information should contact the Registrar's Office or their academic adviser.

KDES students were urged to take advantage of increased educational and professional opportunities available to them by members of two deaf parents panels. The panel discussions were held at the school April 2.

Deaf parents talk to KDES students

by Barbara Fink

"I never saw any deaf adults. I thought maybe they all died."

This was an experience related by Robert Mather, one member of a deaf parents panel that spoke to KDES students April 2. The panel discussion was one activity offered during Deaf Heritage Month at the school.

Mather, an attorney with the U.S. Department of Justice, was joined by Wanda Berke and Cheryl Shevlin, both teachers at KDES.

Shevlin and Berke told the students that they decided to become teachers because they had deaf teachers as role models. Mather, on the other hand, not only never saw deaf adults at the hearing schools he attended, but was refused work at a factory because of his deafness.

"That was my first experience with discrimination," he said. "I applied for a summer job on the assembly line at Zenith and was thrown out of the interview when the man discovered I couldn't hear. When I told my mother what happened, she forced me to go back and stand up for myself. Later, the man agreed to hire me. When I wanted to go to law school, people laughed. They said deaf people couldn't be lawyers."

Each of the panelists urged the students to take advantage of the increased educational and professional opportunities available to deaf persons. Mather explained that he functions on the job with the aid of a full-time interpreter provided by the government "because my services are valuable to them."

The panelists also warned the students that teasing and discrimination come from people who don't understand deafness. The best way to handle that, they advised, is to educate people about deafness.

"When I was growing up," recalled Mather, "I didn't have deaf people as friends because I had a bad attitude. I went to hearing schools so I thought I was like a hearing person. Today, I am proud to be deaf."

Other activities planned for Deaf Heritage Month include a deaf fair in the KDES mall displaying students' projects about deafness and a deaf heritage play.

Two new College Press books out

Two new paperback books from the College Press, "Speak to Me" and "Deaf Like Me," have much in common—and some vivid contrasts.

Both are moving, personal accounts written by hearing parents of deaf children. They show the enormous capacity of the human heart and mind to adapt to the unexpected as the parents confront fear, wrestle with doubt and overcome ignorance.

In both books the parents candidly share their struggles with communication choices and education options. Years of perseverance pay off as the barriers of silence are broken. Pain and separation give way to joy and reaching out.

But if the authors share common themes, they also have unique perspectives and contrasting experiences. In "Speak to Me," a paperback original, Marcia Calhoun Forecki provides a mother's and single parent's perspective on raising a deaf son. "Deaf Like Me," a new edition of the bestseller by Thomas S. Spradley with James P. Spradley, is a father's account of how he and his wife came to terms with their daughter's deafness.

"Speak to Me," called "must reading" by the Exceptional Parent magazine, is currently under consideration for excerpting by two national magazines.

"Deaf Like Me," which has sold 30,000 copies in hardback for Random House, is now available in paperback. Lynn Spradley, the deaf daughter, has written an epilogue to her father's and uncle's book in the paperback edition.

"Speak to Me" ($8.50) and "Deaf Like Me" ($6.95) are now available at the College bookstore.

Students volunteer time

Pledges from Gallaudet's Kappa Gamma Fraternity and Phi Kappa Zeta Sorority made some important contributions to Deafpride Inc. recently. Kappa Gamma pledges sold tickets to Deafpride's Wheelchair Basketball Game, made a donation of $75 and did some delivery work. The Phi Kappa pledges helped update Deafpride's bulletin boards and posters and did some exterior painting.

Deafpride Inc. is a non-profit organization working for the human rights of deaf people and their families.

Kendallgreenitis

"Uncle Henry"

Few people on Kendall Green knew him well but those who did called him "Uncle Henry." His real name was Henry Chambers Trundle and for 30 years he was a Wall Street broker with the G.A. Saxton Company in New York City. He retired as vice president of the firm in 1968. His connection with Kendall Green? Here's the story:

"Uncle Henry" and his sister, Elizabeth, were the hearing offspring of deaf parents, John and Alice Chambers Trundle. John and Alice were among the first students to enroll at the Maryland School for the Deaf in Frederick when the school opened its doors in 1868. John later attended Gallaudet where he was a member of the Class of 1885, but dropped out when his father died.

John and Alice were school sweethearts and wanted to get married but both of their families opposed the marriage. The families felt that deafness made it impossible for a deaf couple to make a living and raise a family. So John and Alice eloped.

Following the marriage, they settled in Centreville, MD, where John became a successful produce farmer and where Henry and Elizabeth were born. Both learned sign language at an early age to communicate with their parents.

For the purpose of this story, the scene now shifts to the 1960s. When Gallaudet's dynamic Dave Peikoff was scouring the country for contributions to the Gallaudet College Alumni Association Centennial Fund, two Gallaudet alumni—neighbors of the Trundle's—introduced Dave to Henry in New York City and the two hit it off immediately. They formed what could very well be described as a "mutual admiration society."

Since graduating from Wesleyan University in 1921, Henry had been very active in his alma mater's and fraternity's fund-raising efforts. He was especially proud of the fact that Gallaudet's founder, Edward Miner Gallaudet, was a member of his Psi Upsilon fraternity.

When Henry learned of Dave's purpose in coming to New York, he immediately offered assistance. He loaned Dave a desk across from him at his office. (Henry later told me that he threw paper clips across the two desks to catch Dave's attention!) Henry made and interpreted telephone calls for Dave, introduced him to important contacts and provided him with leads which Dave then followed up on with amazing results.

As a result of Henry's assistance, Dave's year in New York City was quite successful, and the GCAA was able to reach its Centennial Fund goal of $1 million.

In appreciation of Henry's help, the GCAA and Gallaudet College named one of the designated fellowships in our Graduate Fellowship Fund in honor of Henry's father.

That's the story behind the John A. Trundle '85 Fellowship.

The Trundle Fellowship has provided financial assistance to Gallaudet alumni from South Korea, Nigeria, Japan and Israel studying for their doctorates at other colleges and universities. Of the three who have earned doctorates, one is a Gallaudet faculty member, one is director of the Center for Deaf Treatment Services at the Regional Psychiatric Hospital in Northville, MI, and past president of the American Deafness and Rehabilitation Association. The third has since returned home where he is on the faculty of the University of Ibadan in Nigeria.

Henry developed and maintained a personal interest in each of the Trundle Fellows. Some of them have visited Henry and his wife ("Aunt Grace"), and one recipient even named his son and daughter after Henry and his sister.

Henry's interest in Gallaudet did not cease when the Centennial Fund reached its goal. He continued to provide leads, encourage friends to contribute to Gallaudet and made regular contributions himself. He donated the first $100 that led to the establishment of another designated fund, the Dave Peikoff '29 Fellowship Fund.

In 1973 the GCAA membership voted to bestow upon Henry honorary membership in the association, an honor accorded very few individuals. This touched Henry deeply and seemed only to encourage him to intensify his efforts on behalf of Gallaudet.

Later he wrote: "I take being a Gallaudet alumnus seriously. And I hope to get others to do the same."

That is the story of one man's interest in deaf people and Gallaudet College. "Uncle Henry" died this past November, two weeks shy of his 87th birthday. His contributions have had an important impact on the lives of many deaf people and will for years to come.

Just think what would have happened if John and Alice's families had had their way and had prevented that marriage.

As a footnote to this story, to the best of my knowledge, "Uncle Henry" had never even set foot on Kendall Green!—JRG

Richard Urbanek honored by DOSS

Richard Urbanek was named the Officer of the Month for the months of November and December 1984. This marks three times in a five-month period that Urbanek was selected by the Department of Safety and Security as its Officer of the Month, having earned that honor in August, 1984 as well.

In addition to handling 32 offenses during the month of November, Ur-banek scored 29 out of a possible 30 points in the oral review portion of the Officer of the Month competition.

He was one of four finalists in December and correctly articulated the Department of Safety and Security's position on three issues before the oral review board. He scored 28 out of a possible 30 points in responding to the questions, beating his closet competitor by one point.
